I need some help determining some applicable courses to register for to bring my enrollment up to full time status. Are there any courses that, should I choose to switch to the B.A.S. program, would also count towards my liberal studies program? And/or, should I choose to go the Computer Science route in a year, are there any cross compatible courses I can take while maintaining financial aid/ tuition free program qualified?

I ask some fun questions, I know.. sorry lol

Hi William,

I am actually unsure of which courses you should take for the BAS degree path. The pathway that would honestly help very well with figuring out courses for the BAS degree will be the Business Pathway Advising. They also know the requirements for the Liberal Studies major since every advising pathway has students in that major. The Liberal Studies major allows 3/4 level courses that are either Arts & Letters, Social Science, or Science. Unfortunately, Business classes are not accepted into the Liberal Studies major since Business courses are considered their own type of subject (not part of social science, arts&letters, or science). But we can accept up to 12 credits into the LS major. If you do want to go in the Computer Science route then you really need to start on math, and I still encourage you to speak with the ECSMP Pathway to discuss more in-depth about the major.

I personally think that a way to discuss more in-depth about your future is to talk with the University Career Center. I think they can help in exploring how it may look like with a career in Computer Science or with a BAS degree and seeing which path might be most suited for you. Take advantage of this summer to meet with the different offices I mentioned before the Fall term starts.
